Preface

The presented research was embedded in the research project “Development of pastoral and agro-pastoral livelihood systems in West Africa” (ERB IC18-CT98-0280). I am grateful to the DG XII of the European Union for financing the project.

I would like to express my deep gratitude to our partners in Burkina Faso, INERA, Réseau MARP, the GTZ/PDR Poni Project, and to all who provided information at local, regional, national and international level. Without their willingness to co-operate and their patience to answer my million questions, all these pages would be empty.

I would like to express my deep gratitude

... to Professor E.A. Nuppenau und Professor J. Steinbach for their steady support and their helpful comments,

... to Dr. I. Hoffmann, who initialised the project; and to Dr. B. Rischkowsky, who led the project at time of my return to Germany and enriched my work in an always motivating and constructive manner,

... to both working groups, in the Department of Agricultural and Environmental Policy Analysis as well as in the Department of Livestock Ecology, for all the inspiring discussions,

... to all the people in Dankana, Djeme, Hemkpa, Kour, Kourgbélè, Maal, and Gaoua, for their warm welcome and their hospitality,

... to H. Hien, M. Kambou †, H. Kambiré, T. Pickardt, S. Schliephake, and Y. Pale †, for being a perfect fieldequipe, for the gift that we had the possibility to work, discuss, think, and laugh together,

... to H. Djoudi, K. Jansen, C. Pechstein, and J. Sehring for commenting, criticizing, supporting, motivating, for always being there at the right time,

... and to my family and friends, for sharing the perfect and less perfect days with me, for their help, patience, and support of my moral wellbeing.

Thank you all!
