

ACKNOWLEDGMENT

It is no exaggeration to say that this study was made possible through the support of many others. Katholischer-Akademischer-Auslander-Dienst (KAAD) provided the scholarship and Center for Development Research (ZEF) provided generous facilities and research support. Without these supports, I would not have been able to finish my work in the present form. I am also grateful to the Ethiopian Civil Service College for respecting my right to self-advancement and granting me a study leave to take up the scholarship.

I am heavily indebted to my supervisor, Professor Hans-Dieter Evers, for the advice and time he willingly spared whenever I approached him. I thank Professor Jonna Pfaff-Czarnecka and Dr. Conrad Schetter also for their valuable and constructive comments on the thesis.

My sincere thanks go to the interviewed households and numerous persons who willingly shared their life experiences in the survey that helped me to sharpen my understanding of the study society. Many thanks are also due to Dr. Ababy Asfaw for his valuable comment on the quantitative data analysis. I am also grateful for my colleagues both at ZEF and Bielefeld for their useful comments on my research.

Mieraf Mergia and Teffera Seleshi deserve my deepest gratitude for their help during the fieldwork. Many officials in Addis Ababa city administration at different level (Zonal and Wereda and Kebele), various NGOs and CBOs were helpful in putting at my disposal information that was needed for this research. I hereby express my utmost gratitude to these institutions.

Finally most important of all, I dedicate this work to my parents for their active encouragement and all the supports they provided me to continue my study to the current level.

Samson Kassahun

May 2004